Douglas Gordon is the artist famous for slowing down Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho, stretching its running time from 109 minutes to 24 hours (1,440 minutes), so transforming the thriller into a moving sculpture. It is difficult to explain why, more than 20 years on, this seemed so exciting at the time.

Douglas Gordon: Pretty much every film and video work from about 1992 until now. John Quin Reviews 22 October 2014. I once heard an apocryphal story about a murder in Glasgow back in the early 1990s. The police raided a room on Hill Street. Inside they found piles of VHS tapes and several recording machines and old televisions.
